DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

2. Claims 1, 2, 4, 5, and 10 allowed.
3. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:
 4. The prior arts or record fail to teach an information processing apparatus capable of communicating with the external device wherein the means for inputting audio information includes means for switching the inputted audio information between the instruction information subjected to the recognition processing and the audio message used by the external device.
 5. Estevez et al. (US 2003/0,017,846) discloses an information processing apparatus comprising of means for wireless communication with an external device that displays received image data; means for transmitting the image data to an external device; means for updating the image data. However Estevez fails to teach means for inputting audio information; means for performing recognition processing on the audio information; and acquiring instruction data inputted by the audio information with respect to the external device.

6. Black et al. (US 2005/0,038,660) discloses means for inputting audio information; means for performing recognition processing on the audio information inputted from the means for inputting audio information. However Black fails to teach switching the inputted audio information between the instruction information subjected to the recognition processing and the audio message used by the external device. Therefore the claims 1, 2, 4, 5, and 10 allowed.
